This annual event brings together charter school leaders, educators, board members, and community stakeholders to share knowledge, strategies, and best practices to improve and expand the impact of charter schools in Delaware.

DCSN is seeking proposals for dynamic and engaging sessions that will address a variety of key topics relevant to charter schools, including but not limited to educational innovation, leadership development, student achievement, policy advocacy, and community engagement. The goal is to showcase a diverse range of perspectives, experiences, and expertise that will benefit our growing charter school community.

“We are committed to providing an inclusive and collaborative environment for educators, leaders, and advocates in the Delaware charter school community,” said Kendall Massett, executive director of the network. “The foundation for life-long learning is literacy in all things and we are excited to invite presenters who can bring great ideas and perspectives to our conference.”

In addition to subject-matter expertise, DCSN encourages proposals that highlight literacy across all areas. Presenters are invited to share experiences, insights, and solutions to challenges faced by charter schools, and to propose creative approaches that foster greater access to quality education for all students in Delaware.
